

FOOTBALL SQUAD IS HONORED AT LION CLUB MEET

Seniors Presented Certificates For Football Keys at Annual Affair

A burlesque of the beginning of school—complete with band, football team and cheerleaders—provided plenty of laughs for visiting Blue Lions and Lions Club members themselves Tuesday night at the service club's annual football banquet at the Country Club.

The nine seniors on the squad were presented certificates which will entitle them to football keys when the ornaments, now on order, arrive here. Robert Terhune, master of ceremonies for the evening, presented the certificates to James Boylan, Roger Whitmore, Delbert Brandenburg, Charles Burris, Richard Babb, Buddy Badgely, Bill Carson, Bill Curry and Eugene Shaw.

Don Gibson was the coach in the burlesque selection of the team. Dana Kelley was the band director who faced the difficult task of choosing a full band. Don Brandenburg twirled and strutted as a drum major while cheerleaders were Frank Lentz, Frank Sollars and Andy Loudner.

Ray Seblom and Robert Terhune were in charge of the Lions University program.

Faculty guests who also were included among guests at the dinner were William B. Clift, band director, Stephen C. Brown, principal; A. B. Murray, superintendent; J. R. Brammer and James Kyler, coaches and G. B. Vance, Thee and Lion President. W. L. O'Brien each spoke briefly, commending the team on its clean sportsmanship and its courage and spirit despite the long period of defeat this season.

The turkey dinner was served at 7:30 P. M. to the 108 members and guests present. The banquet ended with the singing of the WHS alma mater with Mrs. Donald Schwaigert at the piano.

Six new Lions were admitted into the club Tuesday night also. They were Howard Foster, Max Wilson, Carl Wilt, Ray Warner, Robert Carman and Eugene McLean.

COLLETT CASE DECISION WILL BE GIVEN SOON

Appeals Court May Render Opinion Within the Next 10 Days

The Fayette County Court of Appeals will render a decision in the James W. Collett murder case around December 1, it was indicated Wednesday by Presiding Judge Roscoe G. Hornbeck, of London, when called by telephone by a Record-Herald reporter.

The Court of Appeals received the case which was submitted on briefs, the records and argument on the part of counsel for the state and defendant, on October 10.

It is understood a draft of the decision has been made but it will be several days before the three judges get together and go over the draft.

The judges sitting in the case, in addition to Judge Hornbeck, are Frank W. Geiger, Springfield, and Charles A. Guernsey, of Fostoria, who was sent here from the Third District Court of appeals to take the place of Judge J. D. Barnes, of Sidney, who has been seriously ill for sometime.

LABOR BOARD DEFIED BY PHONE STRIKERS WHO CONTINUE OUT

thing from cold cream to toothbrushes," and "from all appearances the company has settled down to a fight to the finish with the union."

E. H. Gustavson, company vice president, was the first witness at the resumption of the Washington hearing. He said the company was willing to resume negotiations immediately on the bonus payments dispute if the workers went back to their jobs.

Pollock in his testimony contended that telephone services of some of the strikers had been cut off, adding "we know it was not due to the weather."

Taking note of a regional WLB order that the company cease negotiations until the strike is ended, Pollock asked whether the company could propose a settlement at this time.

The WLB at that point adjourned to Chairman William H. Davis' office for consultation on the point.

Mrs. Margaret Farina, vice president of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers, an independent union, asserted the six day strike would continue "unless further word is received from the WLB, or the government takes possession."

Michigan Bell Telephone employees voted their "willingness to strike" in support of the Ohioans.

but withheld a strike call pending final WLB action.

The strike began Friday in Dayton. Federation members said it was in protest against payment of an $18.25 expense bonus weekly to more than 100 operators transferred from out-of-town to help handle Dayton telephone traffic.

N. P. Feinsinger, WLB hearing chairman, told federation officials the case "may require special procedure," and added:

"When the operators are back at work they will have the right to ask adoption of such special procedures and they will be granted within the board's power."

"The only alternative is probable government seizure. In this case, work would be resumed under the same terms as prevailed at the time the strike started."

THE WAR TODAY

—BY DEWITT MACKENZIE—

This column preached a sermon yesterday against over-optimism about when the European war will end, warning that while optimism certainly is justified we should stick to facts and not indulge in wishful thinking—and later your columnist felt a certain smugness when it developed that General Eisenhower had been saying much the same thing at the same time.

Today you're invited to help examine this matter of optimism further and see if we can find an answer to the big question of the moment: Is it still possible for us to have a "white" Christmas, with only five weeks left in which to force surrender? Nazi propagandists are telling their people that the Allies are going all-out for victory by Yule tide—and that is true.

One of the most important aspects of the situation is that the Germans, although not broken in morale, already have accepted the inevitability of defeat. Their spirits are low. They realize that their war effort is irreparably shattered—by severance of communications with other countries and by the awful destruction which the Allied air fleets have wrought. Eisenhower summed the thing up grimly yesterday when he declared that German leaders were faced by a critical shortage of man-power and supplies and were stripping the Reich bare to continue the war.

The 450 mile German battle-line in western Europe is stretched as taut as a bow-string—so taut that strands of it are snapping. The Nazis have no way of repairing this damage. All they can do is hang on desperately in the face of Allied forces that are vastly superior numerically and in equipment.

This terrific Allied pressure isn't something that remains the same as the Hitlerites can bank on its consistency. It's growing. General Ike says his plan is to increase pressure steadily all along the front until the Germans are crushed. He didn't add what we know to be true—that he has unveiled striking power up his sleeve. The Nazis can't strengthen their resistance as a whole. They can only increase it on one sector by taking strength from another, and this lays the weakened area open to fresh attack.

Can the Nazi troops take it? Thus far they've been fighting with unwonted fanaticism, impelled partly by loyalty and partly by fear of being shot in the back by Himmler's picked killers. There's no doubt that, as Eisenhower says, "to get peace, we have got to fight like hell for it." In this connection there's another thought which General (now field marshal) Montgomery gave me in Africa during his campaign against Rommel:

"The German is a good soldier and will fight, although I believe it is true that once you get him down he cracks up."

If that's a correct estimate—and history bears it out—it's up to the Allies to "get him down." Two of the most important factors in this task; most certainly are (1) the state of Allied war supplies on the fighting front, and (2) whether the weather is favorable for all-out attacks.

The weather is on the knees of the gods. The matter of supplies is on the knees of the home fronts. General Eisenhower warns that he wants more supplies than he's getting now. That puts it squarely up to the home front.

Conclusion: If General Ike gets those supplies and if the weather is favorable, I believe it's militarily possible (I say "possible") for the Allies to achieve victory by Christmas. However, that's not a prediction. I'm no prophet crying in the wilderness. The war will run into 1945 if the Allies don't get the breaks.

PATRIOTISM IS NOT PERSONAL, ROTARY IS TOLD

Rev. John K. Abernethy Gives Thanksgiving Message at Tuesday Meeting

Using a basic Christian philosophy as his theme, Rev. John K. Abernethy, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, was the featured speaker at the Rotary Club's Tuesday noon meeting at the Country Club.

That patriotism is not a personal thing but the creation of God and that the world is not a catastrophe but a creation and not the result of an accident were two points Rev. Abernethy stressed.

He pointed out that Einstein in his scientific investigations led to findings which hinged the being of the world to God. Rev. Abernethy also said that human beings should be grateful for souls, the source of courage and valor proven on battlefields and the source of man's dominion over animals.

Rex Bloomer, S 1-C of Madison Mills, was a guest of the Rotary meeting. He answered questions concerning the functions of the Coast Guard and about the Tunisian, Sicilian, Italian and Normandy invasions which he has weathered. Bloomer leaves to return to his ship Friday.

YANKS BUILD CHURCH INSIDE SIEGFRIED LINE FOR MEN OF ALL CREEDS

real church built by his khaki-clad cross mounted on the peaked roof. At sunset the cross throws shadows on former Nazi concrete pillboxes only a few yards away.

Inside, the worshippers sit on or kneel before roughly-hewn log benches. At the head of the room is a long table covered with a shining white altar cloth on which stand a silver crucifix and vases of fresh flowers.

Construction of the church was first suggested by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Olinio M. Barsanti, former University of Nevada football and boxing star and one of the toughest and best-liked officers on this front. His mud-stained men took up the idea at once, and pitched into the job under the instruction of Pfc. Ernest C. Newman, of Hurt, Va., the only former carpenter in the outfit.

Lt. Howell W. Thompson of Watertown, Tenn., was in charge of the work, with about a dozen men led by Sgt. Marvin L. Harwell of Riesel, Tex. Among those who cut and chinked the logs were Pfc. John S. Materniak of Butler, Pa.; Pfc. Roy D. Scroggins, of Houston, Texas; Pfc. Rufus Norton, of Newman, Ga., and Pvt. Blair W. Price, of Lawndale, N. C.

On completion of the chapel, a half-mile from the frontlines, Capt. Sinfield dedicated it, with Maj. Gen. Walter M. Robertson as guest of honor.

As bombers roared overhead and gunfire rumbled in the distance, the chaplain told the congregation: "One of your first acts on entering this country of destruction was to construct this church; let it stand as a monument to American ideals."

Rex Bloomer Will Eat Turkey At Home in 1944

Displaying their homemade Jolly Roger, Coastguardsmen of the famed Coast Guard LCI flotilla pose as their vessel drops anchor at an undisclosed east coast port after 18 months overseas. Veterans of the Tunisian, Sicilian, Salerno and Normandy invasions, the men are: Kneeling, left to right, C. W. Ervin, S 1-c, of Houston, Texas; C. E. Bullock, cook, 2-c, of Chillicothe; Max Smith, motor machinist's mate, 2-c, New Orleans, and Rex E. Bloomer, S 1-c, of near Bloomingburg. Standing, left to right, are J. W. Neece, S 1-c, of Fayetteville, Tenn.; C. E. McConnell, signalman 2-c, Rayville, La.; and R. A. Dudden, electrician's mate 1-c, New Orleans.

Coastguardsman Rex E. Bloomer has weathered four invasions and 20 months of active sea duty on an LCI since he last ate Thanksgiving dinner at his parents' home near Bloomingburg.

The 19 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Bloomer is home for Thanksgiving this year, however, for the traditional family holiday comes just two days before he must report back to duty at an east coast Coast Guard base.

The turkey and trimmings he will eat this Thursday will be the first he has had at home for three years. Two years ago, he celebrated Thanksgiving at the Galveston Lifeboat Station in Texas. Last year, he had turkey on shipboard near England.

Of the four invasions he has seen—Tunisian, Sicilian, Italian and Normandy S 1-c Bloomer says the Normandy invasion was the best planned and executed. His LCI put in a load of troops during the first hour of D-Day. "I sure was scared," he grinned as he recalled the morning of June 6. He said his ship was on the beach, had unloaded its human cargo and was off again in just eight minutes. All in all, Bloomer made 16 trips to and from the beachhead from southern England.

"You just sit and wait and practice," Bloomer said of the between-invasion periods. Some of his "in-between" time was spent in Bermuda, two weeks to be exact, and a year of it was in England where his ship was based.

Bloomer's job on shipboard is to relay orders from the bridge to the engine room, a job he likes, he says.

When he hit the United States not long ago, the first thing he did was drink "a gallon or two" of milk. And he has been drinking milk ever since, the milk he wanted and could not get while he was busy invading four countries.

Bloomer has collected a few war souvenirs—German and Italian bayonets he gleaned from beaches and a ring made from part of a downed Nazi plane are among them.

As for after the war, Bloomer says he is pretty sure he will start farming but just how soon after the war he does not know. "I've got pretty used to travelling around," he commented.

We Stand Squarely for the Best Interest of the Citizens of Washington C. H. and Fayette County.

What's It Worth to Us?

Residents of Fayette County have been asked to subscribe $858,000 in the Sixth War Loan drive which started this week. The real property values in Fayette County as assessed on the books of the county auditor are over $32,000,000 and the personal property values in addition would bring this total property valuation in the county up to a very high figure.

Almost anyone who has priced a dwelling recently knows that the present value of any real estate, either in buying or selling, probably is twice the amount of the assessed value.

These figures represent tangible and material things. They do not represent our productive capacity, the fertility of the soil and the scores of other intangible assets which make Fayette County one of the best places in the world in which to live.

Our government, yours and mine, has asked us to underwrite this asset to the amount of $858,000 in this drive. It is ready to pay us a good rate of interest on a loan which we are asked to give for 10 years.

It gives us the privilege of proving that we have faith in our community and in the thousands of similar communities which comprise America. And our government explains that by underwriting a fraction of our wealth we can help our boys overseas and at the same time keep Fayette County the way those boys expect to find it when they return.

It gives us a chance to save for the future, at a profit instead of forcing prices higher by spending all of the money which is rolling in now. It gives us a chance to get in a few licks at the enemy and at inflation instead of putting into a bank box the money which depends for its value on those same tangible and intangible things we mentioned earlier.

If we haven't faith enough in Fayette County and the other counties in America to invest in war bonds a tiny fraction of our annual earnings, then we might as well quit cold, and call our boys home from abroad to the country which we by such act apparently consider worthless. We could watch them struggle for an existence amid inflated prices after they offered their lives for us.

The alternative is to oversubscribe the bond drive and to keep the bonds.

Back to Normal

It is well not to be too sure about what Johnny is going to do when he comes marching home. You can't take millions of people away from their normal life, and make them camp out, and teach them to kill people, and make their job primarily one of destruction, without wrenching their souls and changing the outlook of many of them. Many are not very adaptable to such changes. Many others may accept their new war life so completely, at a highly impressionable age, that it will be hard for them to change back. The youth trained from small boyhood under the Hitler regime is an example.

It need cause no surprise if it takes months or years for such people to readapt themselves to civilized, indoor living. Shops and offices will seem strange. Many will want to change their mode of life and work. Many, for a long time, will not want to work at all, or may not be able to change back to normal. For civilization itself, when you look facts in the face, is not really a normal, natural thing. It has to be taught to every human being; and when the teaching of a different, conflicting mode of life is imposed, it is hard to get back.

It will be necessary to deal very gently and wisely with the misfits, and still more so with the wounded and crippled. This is a special and very important task for the people who remained at home. They must learn their job, and do it well.

Treasure Trove

The riches discovered by Sergt. Robert Awe of St. Paul, in a German castle, the other day, were certainly something to write home about. On the border near Holland he was nosing around the wreckage caused by a recent bombardment, when he noticed a suspicious piece of black cloth behind a book case. He thrust in his hand to feel around. And lo and behold, he hauled out a lot of gold chalices and jewelry, Chinese art trinkets and fur capes, coin and stamp collections, finally a sparkling tiara of diamonds and pearls. With him was Corp. Charles Triggs of Delphi, Ind. It took the two of them to round up and carry off that loot.

They handled the matter wisely. Instead of concealing the jewelry, and thus probably losing it, they went to their captain for advice. He called a civil affairs officer, who saw that the wealth was safely stored. And it was a big relief to them when they got it off their hands. The story is unfinished, but they will probably get a liberal reward for their honesty and intelligence.

Their story, very likely, when it spreads around, will send hundreds of other G.I.'s browsing around for hidden wealth in foreign parts.

Gallstones — Their Sizes and Types

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

A FRIEND of mine of long standing, an excellent practitioner of medicine, sent me a package in the mail the other day and when

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

I opened it I found a rock about the size of the ball of an adult's thumb. I did manage to make the diagnosis of it, from the shape, that it was a gallstone.

His letter, which came under separate cover, told me he thought I might and the public might be interested in the case. The patient was himself and the gallstone was removed in 1916 and he is still going strong, attending to business every day and having no trouble from the region where the stone was. The surgeon who removed the stone said it was the largest he ever saw come from a gallbladder. These large single stones are unusual in the gallbladder, mostly gallstones are multiple and small.

The larger the gallbladder stone is the less trouble it causes. A small stone can move around and get in the duct and stop the flow of bile and raise (Cain generally, but the big stone just rolls around from side to side and causes symptoms that are often put down to intercostal neuralgia or dyspepsia, or just nervousness.

X-Ray Diagnosis

My friend told me he had vague dyspepsia symptoms for years and went to several doctors none of whom tumbled to the real trouble. That was, of course, before the days of good X-ray diagnosis. Nowadays such a patient would be almost routinely submitted to X-ray and the stone, which was a calcium stone and therefore would throw a shadow on the X-ray plate, would be detected.

As this fellow said, we are probably all of us more or less stone carriers after the age of 40. Stones get deposited in the kidneys, the bladder, the gallbladder, the salivary ducts and all sorts of places. There have even been reported heart stones. In many cases, probably most cases, they are silent and make no trouble.

The records are quite a chapter in the realm of curiosities. The largest stone ever removed, or at least on record, weighed three pounds, found in the bladder. The record for numerosity is held by no less a person than Chief Justice Marshall, from whose bladder Dr. Physick, of Philadelphia, removed over a thousand stones. No wonder his interpretations of the constitution were so solid; they were founded on impregnable rocks.

The stones which form in the salivary ducts are very puzzling unless the doctor has had experience with them. The stone, or stones, get in the duct and obstruct it and when the patient takes anything in the mouth the saliva automatically begins to form and the saliva gets dammed back and the gland swells up. Most of the patients are told they have tonsillitis, but the association of pain and swelling only with eating is what gives the situation away.

Mineral Deposits

Stones are merely mineral deposits of salts and are naturally found most often in regions where some fluid is cooped up in a cavity or recess of the body—such as the bile in the gallbladder, or the urine in the kidneys, or bladder. The salts are deposited around a nucleus which may be of fat or mucus or a collection of germs, or some other form of foreign body.

It would be hard to say just how many stones really make trouble in the body. Some humans take naturally to being stone carriers. The stones rest quietly and do no harm. Probably one out of ten people you see on the street car is blithely carrying a silent rock around inside him.

If anything can dissolve one of them, I never heard of a proved case. Nor did any other doctor of my acquaintance.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

And Nugent said, "All right. Just a few more questions. The night your father died, Brent, you were found in the linen room. How did you get there?"

"I told you everything I knew about that."

"You said someone struck you. Who?"

"I don't know. I've told you. I didn't know anyone was near me."

"You say you were in the hall, starting downstairs your back to the corridor. How did you get into the linen room where your wife—I mean Miss Cable—found you?"

"I don't know. That's the truth. You've no case against me."

Nugent looked at him slowly. "I'm not saying I have," he said.

"But where there's a murder, there's a motive. And everybody knows that you and Mrs. Brent..."

"Can't we leave Mrs. Brent out of this?"

"Not very well," said Nugent. But after a moment's thoughtful silence he said no more of Alexia and went on instead to Conrad Brent's will, asking Craig if he knew its main provisions. Craig said he did. "My father told me."

"How did he make his money?"

Craig glanced at the Lieutenant with a little surprise. "It's no secret. He inherited from his father, quite a lot. I don't know how much. He invested it—oh, a long time ago. Before I was born. Anyway, everything he touched prospered. In the summer of 1929 he sold; everything was almost at its peak. Since then he's done very little buying or selling of stocks."

"He was a very rich man."

"Yes," said Craig. "He was. That is, it wasn't anything fantastic. But more than enough."

Nugent, hard and sinuous as a whip in his trim uniform, leaned over the railing at the foot of the bed. Lights touched his narrow high cheekbones and reflected in small points in his gray-green eyes.

"Brent, there was a queer codicil to your father's will. I mean, he'd lived in America all his life..."

"Oh, that," said Craig abruptly. "You mean he wanted to be buried in Germany. At Stuttgart. Yes, I know. It was an odd notion of his. When it struck him years ago, he had it written into his will; then, after his recent marriage, when his new will was written I suppose that was just carried over. I am sure that he'd changed his mind about it."

"Why did he want it, in the first place?"

"You'd have to understand and know my father to understand that," said Craig slowly. "I'll try to explain. He once had a kind of hobby for family; he dug into his genealogy, oh, away back when. Unearthed a single direct line, and clung to it. Got hold of the coat of arms, all possible records and history, everything. He was of German descent; although I think his father came to America and made his fortune before the Civil War. My father had time on his hands; the study of genealogy interested

"A hobby," said Nugent. "I see. He didn't take it too seriously, did he?"

"What do you mean?"

"Well, did he consider going back to Germany to live, for instance?"

said Nugent.

"Good gosh, no," said Craig. "He was a little hipped about family, that was all. He thought a lot about pure Nordic blood..."

"Approved of some of Hitler's ideas, in other words?"

"No! It was only at the beginning of the Hitler regime that he was rather taken with some of the ideology it claimed—resurrecting the old Teutonic family life, improving the race, keeping family blood pure, that kind of thing. But he got over that right away. There was nobody more loyal to America than my father. I'm sure of that. He much regretted that he'd been even briefly taken in by anything Hitler claimed."

"I see," said Nugent. "Forgive me, Brent, but he did disapprove of your marriage, didn't he?"

"He thought we hadn't known each other long enough. That was all."

"Oh," said Nugent. "I had an idea that you had rather quarreled with him about your marriage. I mean when you married a girl he didn't think was good enough to marry into his family."

"That," said Craig dangerously, "is enough of that. As a matter of fact, Miss Cable was too good for me and the Brent family. If that is all, Lieutenant..."

"No, it isn't," said Nugent. "It's this way, Brent. District Attorney Soper thinks the girl—your former wife—did it. I'm not sure. Until something clinching and material turns up I'd like to hold off an arrest. And I've tried to give her a fair break. But she's not telling everything she knows."

"Well," said Craig, still with a dangerous look in his face.

"For one thing, she disclaims having taken the missing box of medicine. Yet her fingerprints were on the drawer of the desk where the medicine was kept; they were on the wooden handle and the panel across the front. She wouldn't explain how they got there."

My heart sunk, quite literally and heavily down toward my white socks; yet I'd been afraid of it. Craig said evenly, "That doesn't prove anything."

"And she got past my man late this afternoon and went outdoors. He..." Nugent stopped there and left us to conjecture what had happened to the trooper on guard in consequence. "It won't happen again," he said briefly. "But she was out of the house at the time Dr. Chivery was killed."

"A woman couldn't have killed him? Like that," said Craig.

"Mrs. Brent told us Dr. Cable had been out of the house," said Nugent slowly, and looked at the ugly things that still lay there on the towel—the bright, sharp paring knife, the yellow glove.

And abruptly then, after a few more questions about Claud Chivery, they went away. As they left, Craig asked a question.

"Oh, by the way, Nugent..."

The Lieutenant turned. "Yes."

"Did you find only one glove?"

"For an instant something very deep and intent stirred again away back in Lieutenant Nugent's green-gray eyes. "Only one. See you in the morning, Brent. The District Attorney may be here then, too. I'm leaving a man in the house tonight."

They went away then, rolling up the towel and taking it and the things inside it along with them.

Craig lay in silence, his eyes closed, after their departure. And I can't say that I felt exactly chipper and talkative myself.

And presently Bevens came; he'd stay with Mr. Brent, he said, while I got some rest. "And the Lieutenant spoke to the trooper on guard in the hall. I heard him, Miss. He's to let you enter and leave your room whenever you wish to."

"They're still holding Miss Cable, then," said Craig.

"Yes, sir. I'm afraid they are. Is there anything about medicine, Miss?"

I told him there wasn't and went away quickly; there were things I had to do, for somehow, now, everything was different.

It was an ugly difference too, something in the air, in the stillness of the house, in the shadows in the corners and around the stairwell. In our meeting eyes.

There was no possibility of evasion this time; no way to deceive ourselves, no glossing of the grim and terrifying truth. Murder had been in that house, murder on the black and silent meadow. A thing that struck swiftly, out of nowhere and might strike again as swiftly, as silently.

An opened door, with the room unlighted beyond it, was a threat.

Well, I hurried along the corridor. The trooper, the same one who had stopped me earlier in the evening, let me enter my room, this time without a word. But I didn't go straight on to Dr. Cable's room, for the first thing I had to do was write a letter to the police.

I didn't really think I had done any harm or obstructed their inquiry in the least by hiding the hypodermic syringe. But I also felt a responsibility about it, to say nothing of the empty medicine box. So light in my hand when I weighed it and looked at it, so heavy on my heart. Perhaps now that Claud Chivery was dead Dr. Cable would tell me what she knew of it.

But just now I had to write my letter.

Since the shooting episode, not unnaturally perhaps, I had felt a remarkably unpleasant sense of personal danger. This was now very much stronger. I had seen Dr. Chivery with his throat cut, huddled like an empty sack. The only motive for murder so far attributable was that he'd known something that was a danger to the murderer of Conrad Brent, or to whoever it was that shot Craig.

Jap-less Pacific Is Just Like Lake Erie

EDITORS NOTE: Robert S. Harper, who began his newspaper career in Washington C. H. as a news boy in the Pacific covering the war against Japan for the Ohio State Journal as an accredited war correspondent assigned to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command area. His reports are published in the Record-Herald through the courtesy of the Ohio State Journal.

By ROBERT S. HARPER

SOMEWHERE IN THE CENTRAL PACIFIC—(Delayed)—

Transferred from a transport to a heavy cruiser, I find myself now with a Navy task force in waters that not so long ago were considered to be dominated by the Japanese. But that time has past, thanks to the U. S. Navy, and to sail this area now is just about as exciting as taking the Sandusky to Detroit or U. S. E. on Lake Erie.

This afternoon there was gunnery practice and that means plenty of noise. To stand on the deck of a heavy cruiser when the long sleek guns begin to speak and the anti-aircraft batteries open up is an experience that will make your ears ring for hours. You plug your ears with your fingers and stand on tiptoe, but every fibre in your body reacts to the shock. You take it for a time, then you begin to quake inside and your stomach does funny things.

It was just play, but it gave me an idea of what it must be like when the big boys of the fleet stand off a Japanese-held island and fire for hours on end to soften it up for the landing parties.

No one can watch this firing without taking off his hat to Navy gunners. They can literally drop a shell in it miles away while cruising at full speed in rough water. With Lieutenant Commander S. M. Christensen of 882 Cleveland St., Oakland, Calif., I saw a demonstration of firing that proves American naval gunnery is the best in the world.

For lack of a better target, the ships appear to be firing at each other. Not exactly at each other, to be sure, but at a designated spot nearby. Watch a battleship just barely visible on the horizon.

You see a puff of smoke, then start counting the seconds. After what seems an incredibly long time, there is a great splash at a few hundred yards from the cruiser; the salvo has landed and the shells burst beautifully on contact, sending out a cloud of greenish smoke. This occurs time after time and the shells land in the exact spot—the same distance aft of the ship—with relentless regularity.

Now the ack-ack boys will get their chance. A plane is catapulted into the air from another cruiser, towing a "sleeve" humdrum of yards long behind it. The pilot pulls off quite a distance, then heads forward parallel with the long line of warships. The din is terrific as every AA battery goes into action. The sky around the target is filled with tracers and the "sleeve" is torn to bits. A Jap torpedo plane or dive bomber could live only a few seconds in a rain of shells like that.

The cruiser on which I am a passenger has been through some of the toughest fighting in the Pacific. She wears across her brow—painted high on the superstructure—the sign of Jap planes shot down and enemy surface craft sunk.

And she has been hit, too! One of the deck gun shields is twisted and torn—a shell struck it. A gun bears the scar of a hit that was almost direct—but not quite. The members of the crew are proud of these scars and point them out like a little boy shows off the bruises won in a football game.

My roommate is Lieutenant Commander Frank Rile, an Academy man, 28 years old, who served on the Enterprise when she fought that immortal battle in the Solomons. After the firing, we discussed the range and the timing. My guess was that the distance was about 10 miles. Pretty close, he said, it was nine and one-half miles.

Every meal aboard this cruiser is like that wonderful dinner set before me on the transport off New Guinea—only they seem to get better. The wardroom, which corresponds to the lobby of a hotel, serves as lounge, reading room, assembly hall and dining room.

On this phase of the trip, the wardroom is crowded, because the "flag"—admiral's staff—is aboard. There are two "sittings" for each meal, but I am lucky. Being a war correspondent, the Navy affords me every courtesy and I sit with the executive officer, C. A. Ferriter, Commander, U. S. N., of 274 Miller Ave., Portsmouth, N. H. That means "first table."

On my left is Lt. Richard Lyman Lowe, U. S. N. He knows all about Columbus, having lived there at one time. He and his mother resided at 85 E. Sixteenth Ave. His mother, Mrs. Nora Lowe, now lives at 1051 Main St., Walpole, Mass. "Dick" said he has a number of relatives living south of Columbus, mostly around Groveport.

Papers Heard Tuesday at Browning Club

Mrs. Ormond Dewey gave a paper entitled "Our Delinquent Children," when members of the Browning Club assembled in regular session at Hotel Washington, Tuesday evening. This subject dealt with how juvenile courts are handling these "problem children," and just what steps are being taken in the larger cities to combat unruly youngsters. She closed by reading an article entitled, "Europe's Hungry Children," which was of an informative nature and proved to interest the members greatly.

Mrs. Earl Parker gave as her subject "Quest for the Old and Beautiful Through Art," which dealt with a brief history of art through the ages. She said "the needs of human beings are alike the world over; the tent, the temple and the tomb draw upon the inventive genius of all people alike. A place in which to live which shall be as beautiful as our knowledge and means will permit. A place in which to worship which shall be adorned with the choicest manifestations of thought and are a quiet spot somewhere to bear evidence that we are not forgotten." She displayed an Arabian hanging and explained the ancient decorative symbols used in the design. She then said "from the earliest times, beads have been used by devotees of various religions throughout the world" and displayed a rosary made from dyed horse-hair from South America. She read the quotation, "with the impulse born of the craving for some tangible, outward and visible sign of his inward and spiritual nature, man has attached to the rosary deep significance as a symbol of prayer and devotion and through the ages has counted his beads reverently in his effort to reach up through the medium of the known to the unknown."

She then gave a brief demonstration of "tyndying" an ancient art that originated in India, and displayed a Persian prayer rug.

Mrs. Glenn Rodgers closed the evening's program by having as her topic, "Social Service As A Career." She explained how these workers are trained, their salary at the beginning of their work. She stressed the need for social service workers in closing.

On December 11, the last supper of the season will be held when they will be discontinued until April.

The serving tables were laden with a fine variety of delicious viands, and following the hour at the tables, informal visiting and entertainment was provided by the coterie of capable hostesses.

High School Sports Target of Criticism Markets and Finance

By HAROLD HARRISON
COLUMBUS, Nov. 22.—(P)—State Senator Virgil E. Cramer of Toledo said today that unless the Ohio High School Athletic Association made public how its principals vote individually on matters of policy he would propose legislation to place all athletics under the State Department of Education.

"If they don't clean up their mess and voluntarily establish a public vote, open to inspection by all parties, . . . I shall introduce a bill into the legislature to bring athletics under the Department of Education to remedy the situation," he said in an interview.

Cramer and Grant Murray, a member of the Toledo Board of Education, said they objected to association polling of high school principals by secret ballot on all matters of policy.

Murray asserted that "fewer than 10 percent of the school board members, parents and the general public know that the principals of the high schools control athletic policies of their schools by a secret vote."

Murray asserted that business of the OHSAA is carried on by a board of control elected by the principals and "tradition has given them great power."

"All legislation is officially passed by a vote of the principals of the state," he added. "This vote always has been secret—that is, no one knows how any principal votes on any measure. The principal is a public administrator and the people of his school district are entitled to know how he votes."

Both Cramer and Murray said that, for example, they objected to "secret" votes on whether Ohio high schools should play post-season football games, have spring football practice or fix eligibility rules for participation by ex-service men in athletics after the war.

API Cagers Break Even

The API Blues racked up their second decisive victory of the season in as many starts when they swamped the Allen Tool Workers from Springfield, 41 to 20, on the high school floor here Tuesday night.

The API Reds, in the supporting features of the double basketball bill, took their second defeat in a row when the Sedalia boys edged them out by a 21 to 14 score in a nip and tuck game.

Greenfield, registered four from the field for second place in the Blue scoring.

Dairymaids Beat Markettes In Two Out of Three Games

Lloyd's Markettes took a beating Tuesday night when Light's Dairy plunged through to take the first two games of the match before the Markettes had time to catch their breath. In the third game the Lloyd outfit rallied to win, however.

Fayette Fruit Market keglers toppled the pins in form in the first of their three-game match with the Farmers' Produce but in the last two contests the Farmerettes had the charmed balls and came through with a couple of easy wins.

—Spying— On Sports

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.
NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(P)—Everybody who knows anything about baseball remembers Fred Merkle and his famous "boner," but who recalls Warren Gill? . . . He was the victim while Johnny Evers tried out the same stunt of touching second while the runner headed for the clubhouse in Pittsburgh three weeks before Merkle was caught the same way. . . . The papers merely reported: "The game was protested on a technicality." . . . Remember when this week in November used to be known as the week of the Yale-Harvard game?

Bloomington Loses Second Tilt on Tuesday

Bloomington cagers might have won their game against South Solon Tuesday night had there been a few minutes more of play. As it was, the score stood at 29-26 when the final gun sounded.

Picking in the dark,

(Wake Forest vs. South Carolina)

The Gamecocks will be chicken stew.

South Solon led by four points nearly all the way through after the first quarter when the two sets of players stood tied up at 4-4. In the last frame, however, the Burgers went wild and racked up ten points but that wasn't quite enough to come home with the ball game.

Stein and Strough, tall forward and center for South Solon, were the principal threat against the Burgers. It was generally agreed that the Bloomington outfit showed improvement over their first game last Friday.

Seems the van driver who was to take Golden Man to winter quarters looked in Stable G while the horse was in V and there was quite a hullabaloo. . . . Alliance, Ohio, has organized the first women's auxiliary of the "National Hot Stove League." . . . Wonder if the girls will split the kindling? . . . The football giants could field an entire backfield without college varsity experience. Bill Paechal played only a few minutes of frosh ball at Georgia Tech, Howie Livingston is a product of Fullerton (no relation) Junior College while Bill Petrilas and passer Joe Sulaitis didn't attend college.

Fielder's Choice
When St. Charles High School of Columbus, O., played at Worthington the other day the whistle tooted on the first play and Referee Billie Howard gave the Worthington captain his choice of five penalties. . . . The officials had detected five St. Charles fouls—illegal formation, backfield man in motion, offside holding and clipping.

DAY'S ACTIVITIES IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The stock market held its gains registered since Monday and some leaders edged out further narrow, important in today's quiet pre-holiday session. . . . Early advances ranging from fractions to around a point were reduced and in some cases eliminated by realizing sales but after this mid-pressure abated the list steadied, with volume tapering near the fourth hour. . . . Stocks, rails and specialties had the best support at the start but the carriers later turned around and were steady. Bonds and commodities were steady.

Ohio Water Service Co. Plans Important Changes

BETTER WATER SUPPLY TO BE SOUGHT HERE

Breaks Away from Federal Corporation and Plans New Stock Issue

Simultaneously with its application to the State Public Utilities Commission for authority to issue 121,566 shares of new $10 par value stock under a capital readjustment plan to break away from The Federal Water and Gas Corporation, an announcement was made by G. Taylor Evans, vice president and general manager of the Ohio Water Service Co. that a competent engineer is to be employed within a short time to determine upon plans for increasing and insuring an abundant water supply here at all times.

The Ohio Water Service Co. points out in its application for issuance of the new stock, that it operates waterworks plants in Washington, C. H., Struthers, Massillon, Marysville and Circleville and that it now has 40,522 shares of no par common stock outstanding, valued at $3,155,897.71.

The company proposes to exchange three shares of the new stock for one of the present issue, with $1,940,237.71 to be transferred to paid-in surplus.

About two years ago, the Securities and Exchange Commission directed the Federal Water and Gas Corp., holding the controlling interest in the Ohio Water Service Co. through ownership of approximately two-thirds of its holdings. This stock is to be sold to Ohio interests.

In a telephone conversation from Youngstown with the Record-Herald Tuesday afternoon, Evans stated that data of various surveys made in connection with a more adequate water supply for Washington C. H., are to be placed in the hands of a prominent engineer, who is to go over all the data with a view to presenting plans and carrying them into execution, for a greatly increased water supply for Washington C. H.

Evans said that three general plans are being considered here in an effort to provide an abundant water supply at all times, regardless of drought conditions.

The first is to sink large, deep wells of 12 to 16 inches in diameter, tapping the large body of water in the porous Niagara limestone where caverns up to several feet in depth are found, full of water.

The second proposal to be considered is a "mine well," which consists of a shaft some 15 to 20 feet in diameter, sunk into the limestone, with large tunnels branching off in various directions, to provide a great inflow of water from the lower levels.

The third proposal considered is impounding a large reservoir of water by damming one of the streams, or otherwise providing such a reservoir.

At the present time the large, deep wells seem to be the first consideration as providing the abundant water supply.

Evans indicated that as soon as the government restrictions are removed, and the engineer makes his recommendations, steps will be taken toward increasing the water supply for Washington C. H.

At the present time the water situation is precarious with no indication as to when it might suddenly give out as the water table drops, and with only small wells tapping the lower supply of water.

In connection with the new issue of stock being sought it is understood that the holdings of Federal Water and Gas will be purchased by underwriters with the intention of a public distribution and that in order to facilitate such distribution a new $10 par common stock will be issued in exchange for the present Class "A" common outstanding on the basis of three shares of new common stock for each share of old.

The equity position in the company of holders of the present stock will remain unchanged.

"Upon completion of the purchase and distribution, the Ohio Water Service Co. will no longer be under the jurisdiction of the Securities Exchange Commission as a subsidiary of a holding company. It will, of course, still be subject to regulation by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio."

"It is also understood that the management of the company will remain under the direction of G.

FORMER COUNTY DOG WARDEN IS HIT BY TRAIN

Andy Nelson Hurt Severely At West Temple Street B. & O. Crossing

Former county dog warden and deputy sheriff, Andy C. Nelson, was badly injured at 6:15 A. M. Wednesday, when a B. and O. northbound freight engine struck his automobile at the West Temple Street crossing, and badly wrecked the car.

Nelson apparently did not see the approaching train, although another car had stopped to wait for the train to cross, and he drove directly in front of the engine, which struck his car about midway, carried it up the track for 50 feet, and left the Chevrolet coupe badly mangled up.

Nelson sustained a series of bad gashes about his head, including a five inch gash across the top of his head, a gash on his chin, one over his right eye, and other injuries of a painful nature.

He was removed to Dr. Paul Craig's office where Policeman R. C. Palmer, with a first aid kit, rendered assistance until Dr. Craig reached the scene.

Nelson was bleeding profusely, and action of Palmer halted the flow of blood until the wounds could be dressed.

Nelson is employed at the Webber C. French plant in this city. Not only did he serve many years as dog warden and deputy sheriff, but he was formerly a member of the Washington C. H. police force.

Taylor Evans of Poland, Ohio, who is at present vice president, general manager and treasurer of the company and who has been associated with the Ohio company and its predecessors for 30 years, O. D. Farquhar, who is manager of the plant in Washington C. H., is also a director of the company, and will probably be retained in this or some extended capacity under the new set-up.

"The company was organized in 1926 as Massillon Water Service Co., the present title having been adopted in 1928, at the time The Mahoning Valley Water Co. of Youngstown was purchased. The history of some of the constituent companies goes back about 50 years. In addition to serving residential, commercial, industrial and municipal customers in Massillon, Washington C. H., Circleville, Marysville, Struthers and Poland, the company also operates an industrial water system serving 19 industrial plants and railroads in the Youngstown area and sells untreated water to the water department of the City of Campbell.

The six largest industrial customers are Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Carnegie-Illinois Steel, Republic Steel, Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, City of Campbell and Ohio Leather Company. Other large customers include Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and Erie Railroads.

"The company has reported substantial earnings after Federal taxes in recent years as follows: 1936, $149,009; 1937, $160,554; 1938, $87,384; 1939, $146,483; 1940, $219,744; 1941, $241,333; 1942, $214,290; 1943, $145,362."

Work started on the original White House in December, 1792.

WAR BOND SALES SLUMP DURING FIRST TWO DAYS

Only $50,104 Worth Sold as Sixth War Loan Drive Gets Underway

The first two day's sales in the Sixth War Loan drive here tallied just a little over $50,000—to be exact, it was $50,104.75.

Although the figures are not official (that is, they were not released by the Federal Reserve bank in Cincinnati), they represent a careful check of banks and Post Offices in the county, J. Roush Burton, treasurer of the War Finance Committee here, said.

That means that $808,000 or so is left to be subscribed by December 1, the date set for the end of the drive here. The Sixth War Loan actually lasts to December 15, however.

Judging from the report made Wednesday, most solicitors have not yet begun their work, it was believed. The fact that Thanksgiving Day breaks into the middle of the week was cited as a reason for workers putting off their solicitation "until after Thanksgiving."

37th Officer Speaks

"Fighting this war is no picnic," reports Captain Frank Middelburg, an infantry captain in Ohio's Fighting 37th, still on duty in the South Pacific.

"The Jap is a tough, wily opponent and he's naturally at home in the jungle. We had to learn to live on these islands and to beat the Jap at his own game."

"One of the reasons we've been able to beat him is because we had the stuff to do it. I have known times when one bazooka, or one mortar, or one machine gun has pulled us out of some pretty tough places."

"I have seen Japs killed by rifle bullets, by flame throwers and by grenades and shells—equipment that you have made possible by your efforts and War Bond purchases."

"No, fighting the Jap is no picnic. It's a dirty, messy business that involves us all—whether we fight from the home front or the battle front."

"Somewhere in the Southwest Pacific, a soldier of the 37th Division is counting on your support. Don't let him down."
